As part of our national expansion programme, Rapleys is delighted to announce the opening of our Cambridge office. Situated in the rejuvenated Station Road business district, just yards from the train station, it puts Rapleys in the heart of business for the city. In this context, we are pleased to announce the appointment of Stuart Harris who will, alongside the existing partnership, be responsible for promoting and coordinating the delivery of our core property consultancy and town planning services from the new office. Stuart has 30 years' experience in the Cambridge property market.

The rationale for the initiative is four-fold;

- To provide existing and future clients with further choice in the Cambridge market
- To take advantage of our long established presence in the county: Rapleys was established in Huntingdon in 1951
- To address opportunities afforded by the profile of the City and the wider region which is growing rapidly in its commercial importance
- To build the practice's nationwide presence by adding a further 'hub' to our city locations across the UK.

Professional and transactional teams are already in place to ensure you receive the very best talent focused on your business. These teams are partner led and formed by professionals who both live and work in the city, with strong established relationships across Cambridge's range of complementary consultancy services.

The Cambridge service lines include:

- Town Planning
- Building Consultancy
- Development
- Viability & Affordable Housing
- Commercial Agency
- Landlord & Tenant
- Investment

The service offer will benefit from local knowledge and national insight. Our services can be commissioned on a solus or multi-disciplinary basis and will be targeted to add value and maximise the opportunities afforded across the property sector.

Robert Clarke, Senior Partner, comments: "this represents a key and further stage in Rapleys' expansion and we are delighted to be able to position ourselves in Cambridge. With our well established base, capabilities and reputation in the region, our clients can be confident they will receive knowledgeable and commercially focused advice from the new office."
